

Tim Crawford serves as the Senior Advisor to the Director of the Office of Information Collection at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) functioning as the Agency lead for Open Government -- responsible for developing and implementing the Agency's OpenGov plan that featured the FOIA Module. Tim is the Project Manager for the FOIA Module and is interested in FOIA as a source to help identify and prioritize what information should be proactively made publicly available, the potential for fostering innovation through broad access to publicly released responsive documents, and business process improvements. He has worked at EPA for 23 years in a number of programs including eGov eRulemaking, data standards and information exchange, public data released through the Toxic Release Inventory and others. While at EPA, Tim has led a number of major regulatory actions, created a federal-wide solution for properly managing electronic records, developed the Agency's initial data architecture, and performed foundational work on its data registries. He is a certified Project Management Professional and has a MSPH from Tulane's School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine.
